LAST WEEKEND TO BE DANGEROUS AND DARING!

DON'T MISS THE FINAL EVENT SURROUNDING THE POPULAR LOCAL EXHIBIT- FORT BUILDING!

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — (August 29, 2008) This weekend marks the end of the Toy and Miniature Museum's Dangerous and Daring Exhibit. Throughout the summer, children from all over have delighted in the exhibit and had a blast participating in hands on activities with their families. Old fashioned play has made a comeback in Kansas City, and this weekend, the Museum is holding fort building as the final thrilling activity surrounding the exhibit.

The top floor of the Museum will become a fort forest as dangerous and daring kids make their very own creative space to crawl in with their friends! With all kinds of tips and tricks for unique fort building, your kids will delight in the hands-on fun of fort building in no time! Don't miss out on this old-fashioned fun, including the chance to explore the exhibit and all the other treasures the Museum has to offer! Fort building is free with admission to the Museum.

Dates

August 29-31

Movie Showing in the Theater

August 30- 1:30 p.m.

Savage Sam- Travis, Arlis, and Lisbeth are kidnapped by Indians and it is up to Savage Sam, their dog, to save the day.

About the Exhibit

Inspired by the bestsellers The Dangerous Book for Boys and The Daring Book for Girls, this exhibit hops, skips and jumps through generations of kids having fun. What did they do? How did they play? Find out what seven generations of kids from ages 7 to 10 had to say. Visitors will interact, explore and share in the fun as they realize everyone is a kid at heart! Games, toys and fun surround the exhibit!
